Major Headlines

Oil prices fall after US and China reach trade deal framework
Oil prices fell on Monday, pressured by scepticism that a U.S. and Chinese trade deal framework would immediately boost oil demand and after Iraq's oil minister confirmed an oilfield fire had not affected the OPEC member's oil exports. Brent crude futures were down 32 cents, or nearly 0.5%, to $65.62 a barrel at 1015 GMT. U.S. West Texas Intermediate crude futures were down 30 cents, also nearly 0.5%, to $61.20. U.S. Treasury Secretary Scott Bessent said on Sunday U.S. and Chinese officials had hashed out a "substantial framework" for a trade deal that could avoid 100% U.S. tariffs on Chinese goods and achieve a deferral of China's rare-earth export controls in trade discussions this week. see more…

Gold Futures Enter Inflection Zone as Market Prepares for
Gold futures are entering a critical inflection zone as the market consolidates around $4,126.9, down a modest 0.26% for the session. The 15-minute chart reveals a tightening structure following an impulsive decline from the October high of $4,398 to the recent low of $4,021, defining a clear corrective leg within a broader bullish framework. This phase appears to be part of a 30–60–90-day mean reversion cycle, where price compresses see more…

U.S. stock futures edge higher ahead of key inflation data; Intel
U.S. stock futures edged marginally higher Friday ahead of the release of key inflation data that could provide clues about the extent of the Federal Reserve's rate-cutting cycle. At 05:35 ET (09:35 GMT), Dow Jones Futures rose 65 points, or 0.1%, S&P 500 Futures gained 24 points, or 0.5%, and Nasdaq 100 Futures climbed 140 points, or 0.6%. The main averages on Wall Street ended in the green on Thursday, buoyed largely by President Donald Trump's confirmation that he will meet with Chinese counterpart Xi Jinping in South Korea later this month. The S&P 500 is on track for a 1.1% gain this week. see more…

USD/JPY consolidates near 153.00 with US Inflation, PMIs
The US Dollar holds previous gains, with price action steady, a few pips below the 153.00 line. Investors are biding their time ahead of the releases of September's US Consumer Prices Index (CPI) data and October's preliminary S&P Global Purchasing Managers Indexes (PMIs), due later on Friday. US inflation is expected to have accelerated further in September, pushing the yearly CPI to a 3.1% yearly rate, its highest reading since May last year, up from 2.9% in August. see more…

EURUSD consolidates Near Key Levels Ahead of CPI Report
Earlier this week, Canadian inflation came in slightly higher, stabilizing USDCAD below the 1.4080 resistance. Now, attention shifts to the U.S. CPI data, where markets are also anticipating a sticky print. Expectations for weak labor market data have also kept traders cautious, maintaining both EURUSD and DXY in consolidation near critical breakout zones that could define the next directional move. Potential catalysts include CPI results, Fed remarks, updates on the U.S. government shutdown, and tariff developments. see more…

US CPI Data in Focus as Markets Question Dovish Fed Outlook
The US dollar traded lower against most of its major peers, gaining ground only against the yen and the pound, with individual stories from Japan and the UK weighing on those currencies rather than the dollar receiving fuel. Although dollar traders are closely monitoring headlines regarding trade talks between the US and China, they are likely to lock their gaze on the US CPI data for September today, which will be released delayed amid the ongoing US government shutdown. Bearing in mind that the prices subindex see more…
